~ by the Numbers ~

241

Number of exceptionally long-lived Rottweilers catalogued in the Exceptional Longevity Database at the Center for Exceptional Longevity Studies since 2005

162

Number of females in the Exceptional Longevity Database. Among people who live to be 100, there is a clear female longevity advantage (4:1 over males). Likewise, we have discovered a 2:1 female longevity advantage among the oldest-old Rottweiler dogs (162 females; 79 males)

63

Number of exceptionally long-lived Rottweilers that have undergone autopsy evaluation of tissues to unlock the secrets of their cancer resistance

41

Number of states in which Dr. Waters' research team has validated and studied exceptionally long-lived Rottweilers

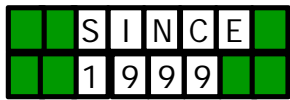

40

Number of days required for Dr. Waters to complete the cross-country scientific expedition

The Old Grey Muzzle Tour 2013

~ by the Numbers ~

14

Years that Dr. Waters' research team has been studying aging in pet dogs as a model for human healthspan

13

Age at which Rottweilers reach the age equivalent to 100 year-old humans (centenarians)

12

Number of canine centenarians that Dr. Waters will visit in their homes on The Old Grey Muzzle Tour 2013

9

Number of Celebration stops along the Tour where Dr. Waters will meet with groups inspired by the research

3

Goals of The Old Grey Muzzle Tour 2013:
To better define successful aging;
To better understand cancer resistance;
To raise public awareness of the need for this kind of "connecting" research

1

One Health: The Old Grey Muzzle Tour is an exemplar of research initiatives intended to benefit the health of animals and humans
